A comedy of errors—the late Wisconsin assembly.

General Butler did not carry Rhode I sland in his pocket at the late election.

Rhode Island is small but it sat down pretty heavily upon William Sprague's

The democrats will have a hard time of it in 1884. They will have both Ben Butler and a free trade on their hands.

Now that a postmaster general has been found, the president will go to Florida and see what he can find in the line of fowl and fishes.

The first order from the postoffice department is that now postmaster general's name must be pronounced Gresh-am, and not Gre-sham. No one will object to

It will be a good long while before the democrate of Wisconsin elect another assembly. One dose will last the people a long time.

The Burlington Hawkeyo has found out what ails the democratic party. Its trouble seems to be that it is like a river with a delta-"it has more mouths than

The Clifford-Pugh murder case came up in the supreme court on Friday, but the hearing was postponed on account of illness in the family of one of the defend ant's coupsel.

The Rev. Dr. Chapin, president of Boloit college, has gone to Constantinople for the American board of foreign missions, to sit on an arbitration of some disputed matters with the American church

The president will soon be down in Florida sitting on the bank of some oreek fishing. We hope no fish in Flor ida waters will be mean enough not to bite for the president of the United Nothing could give the democrats of ex-President Hayes, for governor of that state. That would mean sure defeat; but Mr. Hayes is not a candidate, and therefore the democrats can possess their souls in peace.

Mr. James Parton, whose biographical works flood the country, is lecturing on the coming man's religion. There is nothing that Mr. Parton knows so little about as religion. He never had any himself, and if the coming man should follow the precept of the great biographer, he would be devoid of all religion.

Postmaster General Gresham has but one leg--the other was left on a battlefield near Atlanta. Before he went into the fight he said he would make himself a major general or "bust." He "busted" his leg, but did not make himself a major general. The fates were against him on that day.

Ex-Senator Thomas W. Ferry, of Michigan, whose political defeat and financial ruin occurred the same week, will go to Europe this spring and stay a year for the benefit of his health. A sister and a nephew will accompany him. The pecple of this country will deeply regret that so dark a cloud hangs over the life of Thomas W. Ferry.

The counties of Rock and Dane should come to the front with their tobacco. The managers of the southern exposition at Louisville, which is to open the first of August next and continue for one hundred days, are making arrangements for an extensive show of leaf tobacco, to which they desire Wisconsin growers to contribute.

The Ohio legislature has finally decidod to submit the liquor question to a vote of the people on amending the constitution. The question now before the people of that state will be license or prohibition. This perplexing question will therefore soon be settled. It will be voted upon next October at the state

The outgoing mayor of Ciucinnati, who is Mean by name and somewhat mean by nature, colebrated election day by pulling his pistol and threatening to shoot some one. Probably too much of Cincinnati bad whisky caused him to thirst for blood. He did not particularly hurt auyone, but he bumiliated the city and disgraced the office he held.

In Fulton county, Pennsylvania, there was but one greenback tvote cast at the general election last fall. The chairman of the greenback organization in Bedford county, undertook the search for the man who cast this yote. When the lone voter was found he was presented with a copy of Scott's poems as a testimonial to his moral courage.

An item: "The republican party has had charge of the treasury of the United States for over twenty-three years. The $100,000,000 was counted the other day, and was short only a single nickel." There wouldn't have been a hundred millions in the treasury if the democrats had been in power, and no 19 per cent. premium on 4 per cent. government

This item has started on a trip through the country. "Several Chicago capitalists, among whom is J. V. Farwell, were a year ago, granted three million acres of public land, by the state of Texas, on consideration that they erect a capitol buildhave just sold the land for $10,000,000, things in a way that challenges the good cent, on their expenditure." The annual report of 1882, of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fo railroad company, shows that the system now comprises 2,620 miles. The net earnings were $6,421,000; aggregate net receipts, $7,280,000; dividends paid, $3,225,000; surplus for the year, $1,088,380. This company has no floating debt. Such is the company of which Mr. W. B. Strong is president.

The Boston Herald produces statistics to prove that white pneumonia is on the increase in New York, it has been steadily declining in Boston for some years past. The number of deaths from pneumonia was absolutely less in 1882 than in 1881. The Herald attributes this favorable showing to the increasing cleanlinest of the one city, and the filthiness of the other. The Chicago Journal says that pneumonia is also very prevalent in Chiengo this season, and the filthy condition of the streets and alleys probably has something to do with it.

When Tom Marshall, the great Kenneky orator and politician, lay on his death bed, he turned his face toward the window and faintly said: "This is the end! I am dying on a borrowed bed, under a borrowed blanket, in a house built by public charity! Bury me under that oak tree where there is plenty of room. I have been crowded all my life." Marshall was a brilliant man, a most eloquent public speaker, but whether in congress or on the bench could not keep from drinking, and this embittered his whole life and reduced him to extreme poverty.

The new senator from Nebraska, General Manderson, is a stanch friend of high license. It has been adopted in Nebraska, and of its operation, he says: "It is a great blessing to every city and town in contrast with the flood of little petty groggeries which give but little revenue and do harm. Our licenso ice for each bar-room or saloon is $1,000 in a place like Omaha. In cities it is $1,000 Ohio more unrest than the candidacy of for each license, and in villages $500. In Omaha the saloons have been reduced one-half since the high license went into effect. We get $100,000 from the saloons in Omaha, a great deal more revenue than we obtained when we had twice the present number."

> Mr. Frank Hatton will probably be surprised that he did not get the seat in the president's cabinet made vacant by the death of Mr. Howe. He is a young man-less than thirty-five-but has ambition enough for a Napoleon. He wanted the office because it was in the direct line of promotion; and then again he wanted to size his brain with those of the wise men who honor the cabinet. But a short time before Judge Howe died, Hatton called on the president in a sort of a semi official way, and dashed in the executive chamber with eighr in his mouth and a slouch hat on his head, and during the conversation with the president puffing his cigar nor remove his hat from his head, much to the disgust of Mr. Arthur. From that day he was set against Mr. Hatton, and when some of his friends appealed to him in behalf of the young first assistant postmaster general, the president told the story of the hat and the cigar. It is not at all improbable the want of politeness in Mr. Hatton lost him a place in the cabinet.

MORE BLUNDERS.

Aside from the numerous blunders that the democratic assembly made, and that have been mentioned in the Gazette, more have come to light which serve as another proof that the chief qualification of a majority of the clerical force of the assembly was studidity. A dispatch from Madison says that Chief Clerk Bross, of the senate, in making up the books discovered that several assembly bills which had been killed in the upper house and messaged back to the assembly with that endorsement had been treated as if concurred in, duly enrolled and sent down to the governor. where they received the executive signature and were published as laws. These bogus laws will probably go into the volume of laws, but of course the courts will declare them illegal as they had never passed the legislature.

The recent session of the assembly appears to have been chiefly made up of blunders. Blundering began on the first day of the session and did not cease until it adjourned sine die. This is easy of explanation. Engrossing and corolling clorks were appointed without legard, to their fitness for the places. The democrats had these positions to give away, and they were given to persons who could present the greatest political influencefitness not being taken into account. The result is now plainly seen. It is said. and probably said with a good of truth. that the blunders of the last assembly as unparalleled in the history of state legislation. While nothing serious will likely grow of these stupid-mistakes, they serve as a suggestion that it is about time to stop placing such clerical work in the hands of incompetent men simply because they are democrats. The democrats have mon who can fill these places just as well as republicans can fill them, but it seems that they were not wanted at the recent session of the democratic

BUSINESS TROUBLES.

The Bank of El Paso, Ill., Compelled to Close its Doors.

A Prominent Coal Firm of Clucinnati Claimed to be Insolvent ... A Receiver Appointed ---General Notes.

Et Paso., April 7.—The bank of El Pas , P. H. Tompkins, proprietor has closed its doors by the following announcement: "In consequence of the continued heavy decline in deposits and inability to immediately convert real estate and other property this bank is compelled to close its doors and appoint an assigned for the benefit of its creditors." This This was a stunning blow to the citizens of El Paso, for it affects business men, mechanics, farmers and laborers, many of whom had their entire possessions on deposit in the bank. it became generally known When among the citizens there was great excitement on the street during the day, and much speculation as to the cause of the failure. Mr. Tompkins was on kand and stated that the liability of the bank was and stated that the liability of the bank was $150,000 and the assets about $100,000, and that heliad appointed W.C. Randall as his assignee, and that the failure was from legitimate causes, and not from any outside speculation, as it had been claimed, and that he would turn over every follar of appropriy he had in the world to satisfy his creditors. A meeting of the creditors was called in the city hall to take action in the matter, and a committee appointed to wait upon fift. Tompkins to make some further arrangements as to the assignee, but no definite action was taken, and the meeting adjourned until this afternoon at 1 p. m. Mr. Tompkins has been in business in El Pase for many years, and has always proved himself an upright and successful business man. He has been public spirited and did much to build up the lown. Some years ago he built a business block in which his bank was located. The contractors failed and the building cost the firmthen Shir. Tompkins & Co.—some $20,000 more than the contract price. Since then the panic of 1877 and other causes have conspired to embarrass Mr. Tompkins. The sober-thinking business men and others are inclined to be leniout in their judgment. lenient in their indgment.

SPRAGUE'S DEFEAT.

The Effect on the Aspirations of Ben Butler, as Carl Schurz Views Things.

NEW YORK, April 7 .- Of the Sprague-Butler defeat in Rhode Island, Carl Schurz remarks: "The state election in Rhode Island resulted in the defeat of the combined Democrats and Independents, under the lead of ex-Senator Sprague, by a considerable majority; considerable at least for Rhode Island. This result will be generally regarded as a defeat for General Butler, who appeared on the scene as ex-Senator Sprague's main champion, for the purpose, as was widely reported and believed, of securing for nimeel' the Rhode Island delegation in the next national convention of the Democratic party. To-day's morning papers publish a declaration from General Butler, emphasically denying that he is a presidential candidate. This denial will not meet with as much incredulity to-day as it would have done yesterday. He is, however, working hard to recover some of the ground he has recently lost by the investigation of cortain abuses in the management of the Towkesbury almshouse, the enterior of which threatens to be quite sensational. No greater mistake could he made by the investigating committee of the legislature than to perint itself to be put in the attitude of defending the abuses against the charges made by the governor. If any abuses exist the legislative committee should show such zeal in exposing them, with a view to their correction, as to make all outside stimulus appear superflucture." defeat for General Butler, who appeared

An Alleged Real Reason.

CINCINNATI, April 7.-The Enquirer publishes the following special from Washington: "The appointment of Judge Gresham as posimaster-general has been such a shock to those who thought they had the ear of the president that they do not rally readily. The roasons which lead to the appointment have been given in various ways, and all of them have been more guesses. Many of the reports credit Senator Harrison, or some Indiana politicians or people, with urging the appointment of General Greeham, when in fact he was the last man whom any of them would have recommended for the place. The real reason was that the president has all along promised the treasury to John C. New when Folger should have retired; and how that it is cortain that Mr. Folger will soon go out, Mr. Arthur wants to hedge in order to give the place to Dick Crowley, of New York. He did not dare to jump New over Hatton to got rid of his promise in that way; therefore he gave the place to Indiana, and thus froze out the claim of New and Indiana for anything further. Gresham is a man of ability, and will be the real post master-general. He is known to be immensely more popular with the people than any other Indiana Republican, but the forgoing are the real reasons why he was appointed. been given in various ways, and all of them

A Lost Girl Recovered.

Quebec, April 7.—Some time in November last a young French-Canadian girl aged fifteen disappeared in a most mys-terious manner from her parents' residence in terious manner from her parents' residence in the adjoining county of Por's Neut, the popular supposition being that she had been carried of by an old Indian named Songraen. All efforts to trace the fugicives proved fruitless until a few days ago, when some lumbermen working near Chesham, Eastern Tomship, recognized them in the persons of an Indian and a young girt camped in the woods near there. The girl's father has started after them.

The Illinois Legislature.

SPRINGFIELD, April 7.-In the house yesterday the discussion was on the education committee's bill to abolish dram shops within one mile of county normal schools and the bill one mile of county normal schools and the bill appropriating money to pave the streets of this city on three sides of the capitol grounds. Both were advanced to their last reading.

The sonate discussed the bills to establish a board of nine inspectors and to provide for state publication of the statistics, both of which were forwarded to their third reading

Condition of Trade.

NEW YORK, April 7.-Telegraphic dispatches to Bradstreet's from leading trade centers throughout the country indicate that the general trade has changed but little during the general trade has changed but little during the week. A slight improvement over last week is reported, but it has only developed sufficiently to warrant an increased feeling of confidence in future. At present trading in continuous lines is one a very conservative basis. There is no change worthy of note in the businces situation in the west, myo that there appears to be a stronger undercurrent of confidence. The backward apring has retarded the improvement of trade in some sections, and in others the bad condition of the roads has operated to elog traffic somewhat. On the whole, the general feeling is healthful, and the tendency is toward a steady improvement. The reports concerning crops are in the main, fayorable, late rains and warm weather having strengthened confidence considerably.

LONDON, April 7.-The four men arrested in this city within the past fortyeight hours on suspicion of being concerned in plots and threats to blow up government buildings, were arraigned in the Bow street court yesterday. Justice Ingham, who proeided, informed them that they were brought to ber upon a charge of having in their possession an explosive material with intent to use the same for felonious purposes. The statute provides that persons convicted of this crime shall be liable to punishment of two years at hard labor. The prisoners were put down on the charge sheet as Norman, aged twenty-two; Gallagher, thirty-three; Wilson, twenty-two; Dalton, thirty-nine. Dalton is also known by the alias of John O'Connor. When the prisoners marched into the dock a stalwart policeman was stationed behind each. They are all intelligent men, well dressed, and have every appearance of being not only respectable, but eduented. The evidence, both direct and circumstantial, was given almost entirely by detectives. They deposed that they followed Norman from the dynamito factory in Birmingham to his hotel in this city; that they degred his footsteps Wednesday evening, and finally arrested him late that night. When made prisoner he disclared he did not know what the box contained, yet in his pockets were the koys which exactly fitted the box. The dotective also found on him a #5 note, with the stamp "N. Y., March 10." Among other articles found on him were a map of London, and an envelope addressed "Gallagher, American Exchange." The officers stated also, however, that he had in his pocket a telegram directing him to call on Flotcher, at the Charing Cross hotel. (Flotcher is the person who, according to Normang'congaged him to carry the dynamite box taken from him.)

In regard, to Wilson and Gallagher the evidence of the policomon who acrossed them was not less convincing. They doposed that when they inquired of Wilson what he had in his portmanteau he curlly replied: "You had better look." They examined and found rubber look." They examined and found rubber look. "They examined and found rubber look." They examined and found rubber look." They examined and found rubber look. "They examined and found rubber look and arrested in Nelson square, he gave his address as Charing Cross hotel.

It was remarked at this point in the proceedings that the clow to Gallagher, and Flotcher's dispatch to Norman asked him to call at the place which "Gallagher claimed as his residence. The police stated further that they found at Gallagher's recons more rubber large like those in the portmanteau, besides a quantity of money andra letter of credit for $200, dated Now York, March 18.*

Judge Inglam retured to grant the request of Gallagher and Norman that their money be Additional procautions are taken to guard the Bow street prison, and the prisoners, Norm n. Gallagher, Wilson, and Dalton, are caraculty watched.

A WARNING.

A communication regarded by the police authorities as of the greatest importance was received this evening by the "C" division, and a police officer was immediately dispatched to Drary Lane theatre, where Vincent, director of the crimical investigation department, was witnessing the performance of the Carl Rosa company. The communication was to the effeat that a large quantity of dynamite had been consigned from Liverpool to an address within the territory of the "C" division which includes St. James, Haymarket and Regent street. It is expected arrosts of greater importance than those already made will be effected. A portion of the intro-glycerine known to have been made in the Birmingtom factory is hitherto unknowd. It is thorefore sarmised that the consignment from Liverpool originated at Birmingham.

The informal machine of the most scientific and destructive character has been found during the last few days. The police propose to publish a description of the mechanism of this instrument. The magisterial investigation will show that the persons arrested in London, Liverpool, Birmingham, and Cork are all members of the same organization and have been aupported by funds regularly received from America. It is reported that a plan of both bouses of parliament was found on one of the prisoners.

Special detectives are placed at all depotes where trains arrive from the north. It is probable that within a few days the nitro-glycerine taken to Plumstead marshes will be removed and rendered harmless by being spread on plowed land. The receptacles in which it is contained will be cleaned and produced as evidence at the magisterial inquiry. Dalton describes himself as a compositor. The arrest of Norman was made too hastily it appears, as he was to have met Flotcher later in the day. If allowed to keep his engagement the police could have airosted both men. It is reported that Norman has made overtures to the authorities with the idea of turning informer. The note found on Norman was stamped similarly to those found on Gallagher and Wilson. The policeman who escented the prisoners from Bow street to the house of detention were armed with revolvers which had been at Bow atreet station, but had not been used since the Fenian outrages of 1867.

THE GLASGOW EXPLOSIONS

GLASGOW, April 7.—The statement is made that the arrests at Liverpool have furnished the police with a clew to the cause of the recent explosions in Glasgow. According to the latest information, it was intended that these explosions should be on a comprehensive scale. The plot included the destruction of the canal viaduct. They were only partially successful. Several detectives have six ried for Liverpool to work our evidence.

T to Body of Peter Cooper Deposited in His "Windowless Palace of Rest" -The Public Expression of Sorrow.

NEW YORK, April 7.-Large numbers of prominent people called at the residence of the dead philanthropist, Peter Cooper, and letters and telegrams of regrot and sympathy were received from all parts of the United.

The funeral services were held at All Souls Unitarian church, Rev. Robert Collyer officiating, assisted by the Rev. Howard Crosby. The pall-bearers were Wilson G. Hunt, W. H. Appleton, A. A. Low, John E. Parsons, Cyrns W. Field, H. M. Schieffelm, Dr. Jno. O. Aguew, Hon, Hamilton Fish Hon, Jackson S. Schultz, Judge C. P. Daly, Gon, A. S. Webb, and Postmaster H. L. Poarson. Deputations from a number of societies and from the exchanges were present, and the church was crowded. At the conclusion of the services an opportunity was given for the public to view the remains, and a great throng of people availed themselves of the chance to take a last look at the features of the honored dead. At 4 o'clock the procession, which was very large, was formed, and escorted the body to its instruction for the character. In accordance with the request of the board of Unitarian church, Rev. Robert Collyer official. accordance with the request of the board of aldernen, many places of business were closed and hags on the shipping displayed at half-

PROHIBITION.

Name Difficulties in the New Wisconsla Liquor Law ... Indiana Prohibi-

MILWAUKEE, April 7 .- The near approuch of the day for issuing licenses to saloon keepers in this city leads to much discussion and no little excitement. A great diversity of opinion exists us to the manner in which the legislature dealt with the license question, and as to how the law now stands. The state law regulating the sale of liquor in force heretofore fixes the minimum for licenses at $75. As already shown in these disputches, however, Milwaukoo, awing to a provision of the charter mixen acco, owing to a provision of the charter fixing the minimum at $50, was virtually exempted from the requirements of the state law. As effort was made in the assembly during the last session to lower the minimum rate to $30 by the introduction of a bill to revise and amend the charter of the city, in which appeared the following clause: "Provided that the amount charged for such license shall in no such ledges then $30 per pure them. $300 per pure them. esse be less than $30 nor more than $200 per case to less than $30 nor more than $200 per annum."

The action of the logislature raises the license fee in this county from $50 to $75, which will make a difference of $25,000 per annum in favor of the county. One of the clauses of the amouded bill provides that no license shall be issued for a less period than two months nor be transferable. There is really no maximum rate provided for, that matter being left to the discretion of local heards. Accordingly a nucle higher rate than heards. Accordingly a much higher rate than $200 could be charged. A number of the more respectable salom keepers were talked with, all of whom derided the small advance. They advocated an increase to $200. INDIANA PROMESTIONISTS IN COUNCIL.

INDIANAPOLIS, April 6 .- The Christion Temperance union has resolved to incorporate the union with $100,000 capital, in shares of $10 apiece, to be paul for at the rate of $1-per year. It was resolved that members who are voters shall hereafter vote for known Prohibitionists, and it was determined to cit adrift from party affiliation. A suggestion that ex-Senator Windom ought to be the next president was read with cheors. This afternoon the grand temperance council, representing all the temperance organizations in the state, ner. Dr. J. W. F. Gerrish, the president, recommended that the temperance people held thouselves ready to vote for any candidate who might proclaim himself infavor of, constitutional prohibition. When no such candidate was put forward by any of the old parties he advised that a Prohibitionist is oneminated. The Hon, J. Y. Haston, of Fayette county, leader of the Prohibitionists in the last house, made a short speech advising that the surnagainst the liquor traffic be presented with new vigor. Resolutions were passed outlining the policy to be pursued in accordance with those remarks. Prohibitionists, and it was determined to-cut those remarks.

An Oily Rumpus. BALTIMORE, April 7 .-- Baltimore oil nen are aroused, and the coming of the National Transit company's $3,000,000 oil pipe line has created no little sensation and excited much apprehension. Many of the oil dealers think the National Transit company means the Standard Oil company, which in lurn means the monopoly of a great corporation, and have come ont with a statement that in 1877, before the Standard company gobbled up the eleven large refineries, Baltimore experted 20 per cent, of the oil shipped from the United States. Now it has dwindled down to but S percent. A prominent oil dealer said to-day that a com-bination of Laltimore dealers was boing formed prominent of center said to day that a combination of Halfmore dealers was being formed to fight the Standard company, and that the Ponneylvania Railroad company had promised to give them assistance. Arrangements are being made to run a pipe-line from Williamsport to Baltimore in opposition to the National Transit company, and the project is to organize a company with a capital stock of $200,000. While some of the oil men are up in arine against the Standard company, and claim that it is the controlling power in the National Transit company, on the other hand those interested in the latter declare that it is a separate and distinct corporation from the Standard company, and that it will, whom the lines are constructed, supply all refueries; Standard company's, united companies, or others, without discrimination. War, however, has been declared, and not wishing to lose all—its oil freights, the Ponnsylvanial Railway company will assist the opposition to the Standard menopoly.

A Villianous Assault.

New York, April 7.—The wife and twelvo-year-old daughter of Oscar Steinfeldt, whohadfbeen stopping in this city, were crossing Attornoy street recently, at the intersection of Houston street, when a buggy drawn by one horse, and in which a mun was seated, apnorse, and in which a high was scaled; ap-proached them at a furious pace. Before they could reach the sidewalk the horse ran against the child, knocked her down, and broke one of her arms. The mother indignantly upbraided the driver for his recklessness, whereupon he hashed her furiously about his head, face, and shoulders, overy out of the long whip forcing screams of agony from the helpless woman. As she drew back to escape the cruel blows arried the whip upon his horse and quietly, we out of sight. The injured girl was record to St. Francis hospital, whither her ever accompanied her. Mrs. Steinfeldt was recrety affected by the accident to her daughter and he injuries she herself had recoved, land to several hours was unable to proceed home.

MAPLESON'S REMARKS

Upon the Late Utterances of Madame Xilsson--- The Impressarlo Somewhat Ruffled. New York, April 7.—The Tribune

ublishes the following:

Mr. Mapleson came down to the Academy of Music yesterday afternoon, just ahead of a big. cloud of dust. He ducked his head to lot the dust pass over, turned into the box office. A small army of young opera managers and monials saluted him as he passed in review. Mr. Mapleson's private office is separated from the main room by a partition about eight feet high. A hugo brass plate shines brightly on the door of his office, and on its broad expanse is written in letters of beaten brass "J. H. Mapleson." The reporter had just stepped into the outer room when he heard the silver voice of the impreearin exclaiming on the other side of the partition to a menial on the same side with the reportor: "Say I'm out. D-n it, Nilsson is in a rage!"

"Will you see a reporter of The Tribune? said the reporter over the partition.

"Oh, is that you?" the impressrie should back. "This interview in The Tribune this morning with Misson is outrageous. Come in and Pil talk about it."

back. "This intervolv in the Tribane win morning with Misson is outrageous. Come in and Pil talk about it."

"Now, d'ye know," began the menager, after the reporter had helped himself to a seat, "Two been reading life art ele" (pointing to the intervious printed in The Tribune yesterday with Madame Missoe), "and by Jove—well, for me review it will you." Mr. Mapleson, tipped back in his chair and reroad the article, commonting on it as he read, something in this wise: "Oh; my dear friend—wes, my dear friend—umph! Don't say Colonel Mapleson; he's no colonel. No colonel, oh? Oh, he isn't. Well now Mr. Reporter, here's all-ther I've just received from his royal highness the du'o of Cambridge—see it?—notibe the official stamp, etc.?—in which he regrets my long absence from the army, and thinks I ought to return to England. "No colonel, ch! Perhaps not."

Mr. Mapleson restored the letter to the pigeon-hole and resumed reading: "They we had no war there, like you have had in America. No, she's quite right. "I can expostly say that Mapleson is the most terrible list I over mot in my lite." Oh, I am, am I? Oh, lian's nothing. I could go into defails about Madama Nilsson—ahom, but I won't. She says further that she'd like to 'much my head." Punch my head? "And Mr. Mapleson unconsciously felt of his head to see if it hadn't been punched already.

"Why, &—n it," resumed the invite impresarie, "ready.

"Why, $\tilde{\textit{\mathcal{O}}} = 0 it," resumed the irade impression, byts not my fault sho's reduced to four operas. And it sho's going to punch my head—I'll yet up $10,000 and ask her what her fifth opera is. And it sho's going to punch my head—I'll but up $10,000 and ask her what her fifth opera is. But I must read this again. She says, 'If I'd see him, I'd Fee! like quoting Sluthespeare to him, and say "Go to."' Yes, that 'Go to' oxpression she must have obtained from Ada Cayendish or Ella Wesner or sonic fragadiomacoquality iconversativith the sayings of Sluthespeare. And 'she says my head is build from 'dobauchary and oxcesses.' I suppose so. Well, I'm hore in the academy all day, and it is a positive fact that I don't go anywhere. My tafler's is about as far as I get up town. I'vo' hade coat lying there four months waiting to be tried on. All the debauchery and oxcess I'vo committed must have been done here in the academy. Pshaw! What nonsense! The, woman's in a rage, Dul'I don't see any necessity for bring my private affairs into his controversy. My wife is at the New York botel with me."

Having timisinel reading the article in question, Mr. Mapleson had aside the newspaper and remarked confidentially: 'In reponting my words of course use care. Say that Nilsson's voice—no, don't say it's worn on, but say that the natural developments of her waven have allared they designed.

but say that the natural developments of her system have altered the 'tessitum' of her voice—'tessitum,' thet's a puzzler for her; she won't know what that means, but just put that in, to-seci-t-u-ra; that'll so her thinking. Her to a state of the real that so her winding for voice is changed, you know. It's like my being formerly able to stand on my head in that corner; shift mow—I can't do it, you know. (Don't pist that in.)—But you might say she is admirable in 'Don Giovanni' and in 'Eaust—in the limit of the state.

admirable in 'Don Giovanni' and in 'Faust'—in fact has no equal on the lyric stage; in 'Meliatolele,' sho is very flue; in 'Mignon,' sho's good; but I say sho has no other roles.

"And by the way," resumed the impresario langing and wiggling on his clair, "you might say that the 'Swapea River' is all very well, but it is impossible to work it into an opera when the footlights are blazing and a five-net work is about to be spring on the andence, The American people are more critical than any others."

After Mr. Maploson had carofully adjusted the pin on the reporter's cravat in a fatherly way, the reporter desad the door and left the impresario alone and in the best of humor.

Mrs. Langtry's Plans.

Synacuse, N. Y., April 7.—Mrs Langley's contract with Mr. Abboy expires on May 5. After that she will make a supplemontary tour of her owe, with Mr. D. A. Schwib as manager, Mrs. Langtry receives from her contracts with managers eighty eighty-five per cent, of the receipts of every performance. The proposed tour will taken the New Jorsey towns in the vicinty of New York, the mining region of Pennsylvania, and a week at the Chestnut Street theatre in Thindelphia.

Mrs. Langtry will play next season under the management of Mr. Schwah. She will visit the American walering places this summer, and will study three months in Paris before the beginning of the season in November.

A Notable Coming Event.

NEW YORK, April 7 -The coming marriage of Miss Edith, youngest daughter of ex-Secretary Hamilton Fish, and Hugh Oliver Northcote, the fifth son of Sir Stafford Northcote, who has been chancellor of the exchequer cote, who has been chancellor of the exchequer of the British empire, is noted as a social event of two continents. The Northcotes are one of the eldest families of commoners in England. Miss Edith Fish is about 26, the youngest and only numarried daughter of the ex-secretary. She is a dashing and expert horsewoman. Of medium height, showing a trim, lithe figure, she sits her horse like a state. Aprince to in complexion, with deep, inquisitive eyes, and the full bloom of health upon her check, her face presents a study for character rather than boauty of feature. The groom expectant is in his 20th year, and is one of eight childron.

ROBIN IN THE SNOW.

Robin, singing in the snow.
Where the March winds wildly blow;
Peering through the blinding storm,
I can see thy tiny form,
On the paling's sharpened height,
Outyer with the song's delight.
Clouds above and death below,
Yet thou singest in the snow!

Not a twig on any tree
Holds a nosting place for thee:
Not an inch of forege-ground
Bare in all the country round.
On the unswept window-sill
Scattered cumbs have been thy fill,
Scanty provender, 'is true,
For a hungry wight like you,
Minstrei, wandering to and ito. For thy dinner in the snow. . .

Trill and twitter in the gloom.

Sunshine bringeth leaf and bloom,
Soon on yonder snow-clad tree
Mate and nest and warning for thee.
One who cares is over all:
I have heard His Enster call;
Trust Him, though the storn may blow,
Sings the robin in the snow.

Oft the story has been told, Of the story has been fold,
In the legend sweet and old.
That thy bosom's stain of red
Trickled from the thorr-crowned Head;
Watching in the tw light gray,
Ere the stone was rolled away.
Perched the sepulcher a-near,
Rose thy song 6" fa th and cheer.
I can well believe it so,
Robin singing in the snow.

MISUNDERSTOOD.

Tap, tap, tap, at Bertha's bed-room door.
"Ten o'clock, my dear," said her mother's voice, 'time you were in bed if you want to keep your roses."

An angry scowl disfigured Bertha's pretty face, and the tone in which she called out: "Very well," was decidedly

"One would think I was old enough to use my own judgment about going to bed," she grumbled, casting a lingering look on the open pages of her diary, as she slowly wiped her pen, and put the cover on her ink-bottle.

She had felt just in the mood for writing. It was too bad to stop just as she was well "wound up," she thought.

"Misunderstood! Is there a sadder word in the vocabulary of the English language? Ah, in many a young and sensitive heart it has rung the deathknell of all happiness. "That is beautifully 'turned,' as Aunt Hattie would say,' she murmured, and she continued to read aloud, holding the pen in one hand, the wiper in the other:

"With each day I am drawing near-er to the tomb. The tey touch of an invisible hand is on my brow. Ah, when I am lying cold and dead, my frail hands clasped over my pulseless, heart regret will be vain. No prayers can call me back. In my silent grave out under the cold blue sky, the wind will chart wild require a contract the cold blue sky. will chant wild requiems over me, whispering that this checkered life is over, and after life's fitful fever' It was just here that Bertha's mother had interrupted her. And now, with a sigh. Bertha closed the book, undressed herself as quickly as possible, and sprang into bed, her mind full of her talent as a writer.

Though profoundly impressed with the idea that she was not long for this world, Bertha was the very picture of health, a fact which distressed her considerably: Willingly would she have seen reflected in the glass a hellow-oved, pale-cheeked, ethereal looking being, whose dismal cough and languid step would move the hardest heart to pity. But her cheeks were provokingly round and red, and her eyes as bright as stars. And though she occasionally ussayed a cough, it was but a wretched travesty on the real thing. Her brother and sisters laughed at her prophecies of early death, and there was no one to whom she could go for sympathy. Only to her diary—the parting gift of her Aunt Hattie—could she pour out her thoughts, and the clegant blue and roll board here was made the reand gold-bound book was made the repository of a great deal of nonsense and false sentiment.

Bertha had spent the past three years away from home, under the care of an aunt who had indulged her to the last degree, and permitted her to do very much as she pleased in everything. Doctor and Mrs. Sumner regretted now that they had ever allowed Bertha to leave them, for they saw very plainly that in spite of the adarantages she had re-coived in the way of music and the languages, her long visit had been a mis-take. She rebelled against the whole-some discipline of her father's house, thought herself greatly abused when called upon to perform household duties, and a dozen times a day openly regretted that she had left her aunt.

"You don't love me as Aunt Hattie does," she would say when given the dusting-brush or directed to set the dinner-table. "Aunt Hattie tried to make me happy."

I shall give Bertha a lecture," said Doctor Sumner, overhearing a remark of this kind one day. "She shall not make the whole house uncomfortable by her nousense."

"No no. don't speak to her about it," pleaded the mother. "I am sure she will outgrow her foolish notions if we only have a little patience. Let me manage her."

Very kind and gentle was the mother's management; but very firm. She insisted on a regular routine, on the systematic performance of household duties, and aimed by keeping Bertha's hands profitably busy to keep her mind from dwelling on the sentimental and romantic ideas, she had gleaned from the many novels her aunt had permitted her to read. But the improvement in the eldest daughter of the house was very slow. She could not in three months forget the training of three years.

"Do you think it is very awful to have to wash dishes and dust?" asked Lena one morning, when Bertha as usual was prosing over the darkness and cruelty of her fate.

of her face.
"The bare fact of the dish-washing and dusting is not awful," said Bertha, "but it stabs me to the heart to have my parents think me on a level with such menial occupations. If mother would only recognize those finer grades of the soul—"

"Oh," mother hasn't time for such trash, said Ned, who was listening to the conversation with a face in which disgust could be plainly read, "there's too much to be done. And vou only want to shirk, Bertha. Tour a like to put all the work off, on Lena and Carrie."

"How I am misunderstood!" sigher Bertha.
She always took refuge in that assertion when not carried to continue an argument, and she derived a great deal of comfort from the reflection. "Bertha," said her mother a little later. "I want you to pay more attention to your morning toilet hereafter.

Do not come to the breakfast table again with your hair in curl-papers."

"Aunt Hattie always let me dress as your Aunt Hattie now, and I don't want my daughters to grow up with untidy habits. And now you can go up stairs and sew the buttons on your

"They won't stay on," said Bertha."
"Because you sew them on with cotton. Use linen thread, and remember that once well done is twice done.'

that once well done is twice done.

'It seems to me that my life is all dish washing, dusting and sewing,' grambled Bertha, as she went out.

'Oh, how I wish I was back at Aunt. Hattie's! I led an ideal life there. She understood me. She thought me above kitchen drudgery. You don't understand my sensitive nature, mother."

Mrs. Sunner smiled, but a heavy sigh followed the smile, for she knew that Bertha really imagined herself ill-used.

"Do you want to go coasting tonight, Ber.ha?" asked Ned at the teatable. "The moon is full, and about all Centreville will be out on the hill." "No," replied Bertha, "I am not strong enough for such wild sport." "Nonsense," said Doctor Sumner.

"You're uo fine lady, full of aches and pains. Go with your brother, and have a little healthy enjoyment."

a little healthy enjoyment.

"It would not be enjoyment to me," said Bertha, "and though you may refuse to acknowledge it, father, I am very far from strong," and her countenance took on an expression of deep malanchely. melancholy.

"Don't get that notion in your head, for pity's-sake," said the doctor. "There'll be no living with you if you begin to imagine yourself an interesting invalid." "Aunt Hattie often said she believed I would die young," said Fe tha, look-ing deeply hurt. "She understood "Your Aunt Hattie is a very foolish woman," said Doctor Sumner. "If I had found out that fact three years ago she should never have had charge of you for a single hour. You are completely spoiled by over-indulgence and noveleading."

Bertha looked as if another word would cause her to burst into tears, and t was a relief to every one when Ned changed the subject by saying that hefore going coasting he would make a rough draft of his essay for the clubmeeting the coming Thursday night.

"What is your subject?" asked his father.

"The difference between boys and girls," answered Nod. "I think I shall touch up Bertha a little, as an illustration to my argument." "Make me the butt of your wit if you will," said Pertha, with an air of

"I expect to be misunderstood injury. always." "Give me some blank paper and per-haps F1l-space you," said Ned. "There's some in my desk," said Bertha, "but I can't—"

"Oh, I'll go for it," interrupted Ned.
"I didn't think of asking you to take such a journey. You know you are 'far from strong,'" and with a teasing laugh?

He was gone so long that Bertha became uneasy.
I hope Ned isn't rummaging over all my things." she said at last. "I dare say I shall find all the bureau draw!

ers upside down in the middle of the But as she spoke, Ned entered the room.

"Did you find the paper?" asked Lena. "Why, what is the matter?
Bertha, do see how Ned is laughing."
Bertha looked up, and regarded her brother curiously. He was fairly shaking with suppressed merriment.

"Have you been playing any trick in my room, Ned?" she asked, with grave But Ned made no reply, and he left the room before the question could be repeated.

The club to which Ned belonged was composed of twenty-five members—all boys and girls under eighteen years of age—who met once a week at the house of Judge Barstowe, and had a thoroughly enjoyable time. The pro-gramme for each meeting was arranged by a special committee, and each member was given a chance during the win-ter to exhibit his or her proficiency in recitation, reading, music and song. Ned had asked Bertha to become member; but she had refused. However, when the night came on which Ned was to deliver his essay, she consented to accompany him to the meeting, to his evident delight. The exercises of the evening had already begun when they entered the Judge's parior. There was no time for introductions, and Bertha slipped into a back seat by one of the windows, and soon became interested in the essay then being delivered on "The Wonders of the Mineral Kingdom." She wondered as the young orator stepped down how Ned would acquit himsely She had never heard her brother deliver an essay. She felt very nervous as he came forward with his roll of manuscript in his hand; but she soon saw that he was master of the situation. He began by contrasting the sports of boys and girls, and the occupations in which their nat and the occupations in which their nat-ural instincts led them to engage.

The natural inclination of every girl is toward a diary, he said. A boy may keep a journal of prominent events, but what healthy, vigorous-minded specimen of the masculine sex-would indular in such could be the would indulge in such gush as this, my friends, which I assure you is a bona tide copy of a passage in the diary of a young lady whose name I must hold sacred from the curious. She assures us on the first page of her book that the sentiments within transcribed are her most sacred and innermost thoughts.

Misunderstood! Is there a sadder word in the vocabulary of the English language? Ah, in many a young and sensitive heart it has rung the death-kneh of all happiness."

As these words fell on Bertha's ears, she grew deathly pale, then flushed scarlet. She had no difficulty in recognizing them as her own and she knew now why Ned had lingered so long in her room where he had gone for the paper the night of the coasting party. What could she do? If she interru ted him every one would recognize the fact that it was from her diary that the extract had been taken. No, she mustisit still and hear it to the end. She tried to appear unconscious, and even essayed a faint laugh, as the words:
When I am lying cold and dead my frail hands clasped over my pulseless heart," evoked a torrent of merriment from those about her. But she was actually faint from mortification. She saw now how ridiculous the sentiments she had imagined so grand and sublime really were. In one moment her eyes

As Ned closed his essay there was a general uprising; a perfect furore of argument, of expostulation and denial. Several of the girls contended that none of their sex could be guilty of writing such trash, and others declared Ned had written the extract himself. Bertha was forced to listen to all sorts of comments upon her "innermost thoughts," and they did her good. She was even, to Ned's great amusement, made to give her opinions upon the subject, and was asked how she could tolerate a brother who could so basely slander her.

Poor Bertha! Her shame and cha-rin increased with every moment, and she was heartily glad when the meeting broke up. Ned had fully expected a "regular lecture" on the way home: he had even prepared himself for tears and bitter expostalations. But Bertha was silent. When he spoke she answered him in monosyllables, and appeared for once to be in a state of genuine distress.

"See here, Bertha," and Ned, at last, "perhaps it was a mean thing for me to copy that page out of your diary. But it was just what I wanted, and I

"Yes, I am," said Bertha, very quietly, as she rose to her feet, "and now let's go down stairs; and you needn't talk about it, please."

Lena mystified, but obedient, denied herself the pleasure of talking of the holocaust; but she watched her sister very closely that day, having grave doubts of her sanity. She did not know that Pertha dated the finding of her senses from the day of the burning of her Aunt Hattie's beautiful gift. As the flames mounted up the chimney her heart warmed with new and noble resolutions for the future, and though she had many a severe struggle before she overcame the weak and morbid senti-ment which had become almost second-nature to her, she triumphed at last.

From the ashes of that foolish diary a new life sprang for her, in which she never found time or inclination to mourn over being "misunderstood."-Fiorence

CUE AND IVORY.

The American Wizard Beats the French Expert.

Score: Schaefer, [600: Vignaax, 500 ... A Great Game of Billiards.

CHICAGO, April 7. The last game in the great balk-line tournsnout given by the J. M. Brunswick & Balke company was played under circumstances that, had the players themselves been possessed of less reputation than they were, would have assured a crowded house. As it was, Control

Music hall was densely crowded. The contestants were Maurice Vignaux, the champion of all Europe, and the conqueror of of Sexton, Daly and Slosson in Paris-though the latter in a third attempt managed, after a hard-fought contest, to retrieve his laurelsand Schaefer, who great ambition in life has been to meet the Frenchman and show him what he was able to do in the billiard line. It was not to be wondered at that people paid for standing-room only, and that they hung over the gallery and climbed on to the window soats for the purpose of witnessing the game. The private boxes and many of the soats were occupied by ladies, who clapped their hands and waved their handkershiefs as they became en-thusiastic over the wenderful playing of both thusicatic over the wonderful playing of both nem.

Vigneaux showed the qualities that Slossor

Vigneaux showed the qualities that Slosson first gave him eredit for by demanding that the balls he weighed, a thing not hitherte done during the tournament, while Schaefer was willing to play with any set of balls hitherto used and tosted by the players.

The game was a wonderful exhibition of skill on the part of both players, and resulted in a victory for Schaefer, who went out in his twenty-first inning with a run of 108. It was a marvelous exhibition of nerve and skill, and the excitement that followed was indescribable.

Schaefer, winning the lead, took the blackball and was kissed off the count. Vignaux, with a series of position shots, madel I and was thon kissed off. Schaefer, with a series of brilliant shots, gathered the balls in the lower right hand corner, and then waltzed them across to the opposite side, making a total of 35 before he missed an easy masse. Vignaux, playing open billiards, took 4 and missed a draw. Schaefer miscued and Vignaux gathered the balls in the lower left-hand corner where, by fine position and elegant cushion carom play, he added 16 to his string before missing a reverse English cushion carom shot. Schaefer, who could only get 1, and that a difficult masse, out the leave, the failing on a hard carom. Vignaux and 100, and missed a difficult masse, out the leave, the failing on a hard carom. Vignaux and 100, the balls breaking splendidly for him up to the 126th shot, which was a difficult three cushion carom, and which he made in grand style amid the applicate of the audience. He finally missed an easy follow, and the call was Vignaux, 165, Schaefer, 220; Vignaux, 77; Vignauxing order: Schaefer, 220; Vignau

Vignaux, 165; Schaofor, 79.
The next large runs were made in the following order: Schaofer, 220; Vignaux, 77; Vignaux, 109; Schaofer, 95; Vignaux, 52. A series of short runs were then made by each player until the call was, Vignaux, 509; Schaofer, until the call was, Vignaux, 509; Schaefor, 492.

It was Schaefor's chance, and he took it. Playing marvelous billiards and suffering at times from unfortunate breaks that necessitated the taking of great risks, he rolled up point after point in grand style, the clicking of the balls and the hoarse voice of the marker being the only sounds to break the silence. At 50 a storm of applause swept through the house and as he neared the hundred, still playing with a steady nerve, the excitoment increased. As the marker called steadily "101," "102," "103," "104," "104," "105," "105 and game!" the whole house rose to its feet and cheered. Vignaux had been defeated by the little American. Tom Wallace grasped the champion's hand, and in an instant Vignaux and others followed. Raised on the shoulders of his friends he was held up in sight of the audience, who again cheered him lustily.

A WISCONSIN DIVORCE.

How it Operated in the Case of Young New York Wife.

NEW YORK, April 7 .- On November 22, 1866, a marriage occurred a Peekskill, betwoen Walter W. Winton and Ella, daughter of Siephen Tunstall. After the couple had been married they went to Scranton, Pa. to reside. They lived togother until September, 1874, when it is said young Winton deserted his wife without any reason, taking with him as a companion a woman named Louise or Lou Wright. Where he went the young wife did not know, nor could she assign any reason for his sudden departure. It is said that while away he procured a decree of divorce from a court in Wisconsin, upon the alleged ground of her desertion. His wife received no notice of this proceeding, and was entirely ignorant of it and she instituted proceedings in the court against her husband to compel him to support her. Then his alleged decree of divorce was for the first time produced. Tunstall, the young wife's father, now brings shift to compel Winton to pay $2,000 for his wife's board from the time he deserted her. Winton puls in an answer in which he admits the marriage but denies that he has been guilty of any fraud. Judge Donohue directed the jury before when the case came to find a verdict for the plaintiff for the amount claimed with interest. been married they went to Scranton, Pa., to with interest.
